PROTECT YOUR HOME

Metal roofing has a Class A fire rating, the highest rating available, and is one of the best roofing materials to protect against wildfire threat. FEMA recommends replacing a roof covered in wood or asphalt shingles with a fire-resistant material, such as metal, in fire-prone areas.

Metal Roof

Non-Metal Roof

Unlike asphalt or other roofing styles, a properly constructed metal roof can handle just about anything Mother Nature will throw at it. Metal roofing can better protect your home against extreme temperatures, high winds, hail, and even fire. Metal roofs are considered to be the best overall roofing material in nearly every circumstance.

A Lasting Investment

Metal roofing is an investment that pays lifetime returns. Installing a metal roof makes you eligible for up to $500 in ENERGY STAR® tax credits, increases resale value, and saves up to 40% on heating and cooling costs. A Tri-State Metal roof will easily last 50+ years with little maintenance and is backed by a 40-year warranty.
